Belmont Light Celebrates Public Power Week October 5th through 11th

(Belmont, MA) – Belmont Light will join other public power utilities in the United States celebrating the benefits of hometown, community-owned and operated electric utilities during the 28th annual Public Power Week which runs from October 5th through October 11th.

Belmont Light is one of more than 2,000 community-owned electric utilities in the United States, serving over 44 million people and more than 2.8 million business customers. Public Power Week, sponsored by the American Public Power Association (APPA), provides an opportunity for utilities like the Belmont Light to remind customers that local residents make important decisions about their public power services.

“Belmont Light is involved in the community, not only during Public Power Week, but each and every day,” General Manager Jim Palmer said. “Public power utilities are consumer owned and operated and provide responsive, not-for-profit electric service. Belmont Light has a dedicated, hard-working staff that is committed to providing safe, reliable power and exceptional service to all our customers—something we have been doing for 116 years.”

In addition to Public Power Week, customers of public power utilities have access to programs and services not usually available to customers of private electric utilities, including conservation services, appliance rebates, and other energy-saving incentives.
